A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled. The following graphic statement will be read with intense interest: "I cannot describe the numb, creepy sensation that existed in my arms, hands and legs. I had to rub and beat those parts until they were sore to overcome in a measure the dead feeling that had taken possession of them. In addition, I had a strange weakness in my back and around my waist, together with an indescribable 'gone' feeling in my stomach. Physicians said it was creeping paralysis. I had been doctoring a year and a half steadily, but with no particular benefit, when I saw an advertisement of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, procured a bottle and began using it. Marvellous as it may seem, but a few days had passed before every bit of that creepy feeling had left me, and there has not been even the slightest indication of its return. I now feel as well as I ever did, and have gained ten pounds in weight, though I had run down from 150 to 137. Four others have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recommendation, and it has been as satisfactory in their cases as in mine."—James Kane, La Rue, O. Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

For Sale by all Druggists.

OLIVE HARPER'S IDEA

SHE AGREES WITH THE SCRIPTURES ABOUT HAIR.

But It Must Be Well Kept—Frizzes, Bangs, Front Pieces, Switches and Wigs Are Not Glorious—Latest Styles of Coiffures—An Elegant Walking Dress.

(Special Correspondence.)

NEW YORK, May 31.—The glory of a woman is her hair, the Bible tells us, and it is certainly true. From the time the first soft rings begin to curl up in the back of a baby girl's neck until the woman's head is covered with silvered curls the hair is the chief beauty of woman. But it must be her own hair and neither frizzes, bangs, front pieces, switches nor wigs. It must be well kept, well brushed and glossy with its own natural silkiness. If it is not carefully brushed every night and morning, it soon shows the lack of care and looks dry and rusty. It is not a glory then, but a disgrace. Not all women have thick or long hair, but every woman can have soft and silky hair, and given that there is but one thing to do, and that is to study its possibilities.

NEW STYLES IN HAIRDRESSING.

The women who do not crimp or curl their hair are comparatively few. If the hair looks best smooth, wear it so, but if the face needs the softening influence of graceful curls, puffs or waves, why, let the woman have them. It is almost a sin not to make the very best of the gifts we have.

Each season sees new styles in dressing the hair that are, after all, but old ones revived, but it would be difficult to hit upon a period when every woman could cater to her own personal requirements in that respect, and yet be in fashion, as she can now.

There are two salient styles on which many changes can be based. One is to have the hair parted in the center or to one side or the other, the whole waved and carried back to a loose or tight knot at the back, which may be high or low, as it looks best. There may be a fringe of loose tendrils or a mass of thick curls. This is a style well adapted to the young. The Spanish style is finding high favor this month, but it requires a mass of hair such as few women can boast. It is dressed with a full Lungry bang on the brow and brought forward and down, almost covering the ear, and it is permitted to sag in the nape of the neck, where it ends in a few short but heavy curls. From there it is brought up again and twisted into thick loops, which are held with jeweled pins. For evening this is a very effective style. The hair is brought closer to the head over the ears than in the spring. Some young ladies, having plenty of straight hair, rather affect the German fancy braids, bringing them up like coronets and not allowing a thread of loose hair or a curl to show. The success of this mode is in its severe plainness, and few could bear it. As I said before, almost every lady can create her own style of coiffure. But crimps and curls will not "stay in" when the weather is hot.

Today I found a walking dress that was one of the most elegant and graceful I ever saw. It was made of blue and green fl-a-fl, which means hairline really, as the colors were wrought by alternate threads. The front was princess shape, buttoning closely all the way down with small round iridescent steel buttons. There was an underskirt. The back was made seamless in the waist, but the two sides pieces were folded over to a point in the center, where it was caught up in superb plaits, held by a steel buckle, which showed iridescent colors. The sleeves were double puffs, with forearm pieces of the same. There was a collar of blue and green silk passementerie set with steel beads, showing the same colors as the buckle. This fl-a-fl is one of the newest and most popular of the handsome summer wools. There are several shades and colors of it, the most striking being the blue and green. There is another novelty just out called Russian satin. It is double faced, with one color in woolen satin, weaved on one side and silk satin weaved in a contrasting shade or color on the other side. It comes in putty color, with pale blue linings, steel gray, with maize, rose or green inside, and, in fact, all the newest colors are represented. This material is to be used so that both colors will show like cascade and jabots, etc. It is very pretty for the light summer cape.

OLIVE HARPER.

A WIFE'S THOUGHTFULNESS.

WIFE—George, my hands are full; can't I tie this bird-cage to your coat button?

Almost Always.

They were bosom friends. They kissed each other every time they met and wore hats just alike.

The one in the morning gown glanced at her image in the mirror.

"I was told last night," she murmured, "that my complexion is generally admired."

The one in the street costume smiled radiantly.

"Generally, certainly," she exclaimed enthusiastically. "Why not, when you are so careful to get the ingredients just the same every time?"

The talk naturally drifted to other topics as the minutes sped away.—Detroit Tribune.

Similar Desires.

Mrs. Mulligan—I'd rather hev the hull family sick than you! Mr. Mulligan—So would I!—Hullo.

He Wanted to Come.

A Boston schoolteacher arranged a little maple sugar party for a few of her friends last winter, and wishing to decorate her rooms appropriately asked her boys if they would not bring her some evergreen boughs. This they did with a good deal of pleasure (the school is in one of the more rural quarters of the city), and the grateful teacher by way of expressing her gratitude gave her pupils a little description of what she intended to do.

She had spent some of her vacations in Vermont, and being familiar with the process of sugar making was able to make her story not only instructive, but decidedly interesting.

She described the grove, the tapping of the trees, the running of the sap, the boiling of it, and so on. Then she told what she proposed doing at the party. She was going to boil some sirup and then pour it upon bowls of snow to cool, and so serve it to her guests.

The scholars listened with the deepest attention, but the teacher noticed especially one little fellow who sat leaning over his desk with his hand all ready to be raised, as if he could not wait for her to finish.

As she paused, up came the hand. "Well, Peter?" said she, and the little fellow broke out.

"How much are the tickets?" he asked.—Youth's Companion.

Love.

Love—A nervous disorder affecting the entire system and sometimes even the clothes and food of the victim. Peculiar to both sexes of all ages, from childhood to second childhood. Always fatal in age, seldom in youth.

Symptoms—Loss of appetite and interest in mundane affairs. Anxiety as to personal appearance. Longing for flowers and poetry. Sudden affection for children, especially babes that the victim has formerly despised. Demented belief in the absolute perfection of some being of the opposite sex. Vacant expression of the eyes and cerebral cavity. Patient speaks in monosyllables and takes an especial interest in the monosyllable "yes."

Treatment—One dose of the monosyllable "no" and good nursing, for males. For females a new sealskin sack, diamonds and a trip to Europe are sometimes efficacious.

An application of stern parents is sometimes of use, but more often merely excites the malady.

Marriage is an absolute specific. But it is so dangerous that it is never used except in extreme cases.—Truth.

Her Treat.

Wife—Now, deary, I made you these nice tarts with my ownie ownie hands, and they are filled with something you are very, very fond of. I'm just crazy to see you eat one.

Husband (eying the tarts cautiously)—How good of you, darling, and what are these lovely tarts filled with?

Wife (in great triumph)—Tobacco sauce!—Puck.

A Matter of Doubt.

Kind Lady—I see a little girl and her little brother crying over there. Do you know what is the matter?

Small Miss—The little girl is cryin because some bad boys tied a tin can to a poor dog's tail. I don't know what the little boy is cryin for. Mebbe 'cause he didn't get there in time to see it.—Good News.

An Anticipated Impression.

Mr. Smallhead (who is being entertained by little Nellie until her sister comes down)—Why ah you laughing, little girl?

Little Nellie (straightening her face)—I'm not laughing. Ma told me I mustn't laugh when I was looking at you.—Chicago Record.

A Great Run.

An English editor recently announced that he would in the next issue of his paper begin the publication of a serial story entitled "The Prettiest Girl in Town." Over 100 girls wrote notes to the editor warning him to refrain from using their names or suffer the consequences.—Exchange.

A Good Thing.

Customer—Are you sure this article will cure my rheumatism? Clerk—Oh, yes. All the doctors refuse to recommend it.—Truth.

Very Much Interested.

Briggs—I was around to Miss Penstock's last night, and she seemed very much interested in you.

Griggs—Did she? Well, I'm glad to hear that.

Briggs—Yes. She said you were a handsome fellow and wanted to know if you were as good as you looked. Sometimes, she said, you couldn't judge a man by appearance.

Griggs—Certainly not. But you gave me a good reputation, didn't you?

Briggs—Of course. She asked if you were dissipated.

Griggs—Is that so? By Jove, old fellow, there may be something in this! What else did she say?

Briggs—She asked if you had money.

Griggs—You don't tell me!

Briggs—Yes. She said you seemed such a nice fellow that she should hate to hear anything against you.

Griggs—Seemed to be real interested, did she?

Briggs—Oh, very much.

Griggs—Well, I must cultivate her. Strange that she never took such an interest in me before. How do you account for it?

Briggs—Easy enough.

Griggs—Why? Has she heard anything about me?

Briggs—Yes. She said she heard that you borrowed $25 from her brother.—Truth.

Right.

It was in a latitude of 86 degrees, 27 minutes and some odd seconds north, where the sun lingers above the horizon for six months and absents itself from mortal gaze for an equal period.

The old man Ekimoo acted cross. "Young man," he observed icily, "don't you think you are working the racket pretty hard when you call on my daughter every evening?"

The youth turned in fierce resentment. "Cruel sir," he exclaimed, "I have not called every evening. I call your beautiful daughter to witness that I have been here only four times in five years."

The father finally admitted that his memory was failing.—Detroit Tribune.

To Be Envied.

"Girls, I had the loveliest dream last night. I thought I was took to heaven in a golden plate of red ice cream, and when I got there the angels forced my mouth open with a peanut bar and filled me to the neck with chewing gum and popcorn!"—Life.
